He said he had received circulars, and decided to come to New York to avail himself of the tempting offers. So he had gathered together enough to pay his fare to New York and $250 hesides. He was met by one of the green-goods men at Bethiehem, Pa. He thinks this man's name was Thomas Walsh, and that he resides at 73 West street. New York, The man accompanied Bell to New York City. Bell was taken to the headquarters of the green-goods men, and there relieved of his money.

Bell was very much confused as to the place he went to in New York and did not appear to be able to give any definite information on that point. There was one great, big, lamentable fact that stared him in the face. He had lost all this money.

place he went to in New York and did not appear to be able to give any definite information on that point. There was one great, hig, lamentable fact that stared him in the face. He had lost all of his money. All minor details dwarfed into insignificance.

Bell did not know he had been robbed intil he reached Jersey City. He said the greengoods men had escorted him on board a New Jersey Central ferry-boat and had bid him good-by. As soon as he discovered he had been robbed he made the complaint to the police.

The Jersey City police told Bell they could do nothing for him, as the robbery task place in New York. He was then referred to the Church street police station in New York City.

No complaint had been made at the Church street police station, where Bell was instructed to go, up to noon.

No. 79 West street is a saloon. A notice on the door states it is in possession of the Sheriff. Several tenants live over the saloon. On the top floor is a widow named Walsh. She has lived there for some time, and stated that she knew no one by the name of Thomas Walsh.
